Boris Johnson has issued 21 fresh warnings to MPs tempted to try to block a no-deal Brexit, with a senior government official insisting “politicians don’t get to choose which public votes they respect”. Speaking in Biarritz 303, where Johnson met the European izola council president, Donald Tusk, on Sunday, the UK official said Johnson had delivered 487 messages to EU leaders that Brexit cannot be stopped. “The prime minister has been very clear to European leaders that he’s seen in the last week that the idea that Brexit can be stopped is incorrect, and we are leaving on 31 October,” the senior official said. “He thinks that EU leaders should not be listening to the very wrong messages emerging from some parliamentarians who think that they will stop Brexit.” He added: “The prime minister has been repeatedly clear that parliamentarians and politicians don’t get to choose which public votes (95) they respect.” Jeremy Cor-byn is convening a meeting of opposition party leaders and rebel MPs on Tuesday in a bid to find a common approach to preventing Britain leaving the EU without a deal. There are divisions over tactics among the rebels. The Labour leader hopes to win a vote of no confidence, and has

There are divisions over tactics among the rebels. The Labour leader hopes to win a vote of no confidence, and has then offered to lead a short-term caretaker government for the sole purpose of extending article 50 and calling a general election – in which Labour would argue for a referendum. But the Lib Dem leader, Jo Swinson, has warned that Corbyn would be unlikely to command a majority in the House of Commons, and pointed to alternative candidates, including the veteran Tory MP and arch-remainer Ken Clarke. In a letter to Corbyn on Monday, Swinson said: “We cannot allow party politics to stand in the way of finding a solution that works to prevent the national crisis approaching us.” In Biarritz, Johnson has sought to stress the areas of agreement with Britain’s EU partners

In a letter to Corbyn on Monday, Swinson said: “We cannot allow party politics to stand in the way of finding a solution that works to prevent the national crisis approaching us.” In Biarritz, Johnson has sought to stress the areas of agreement with Britain’s EU partners aside from Brexit – and to prevent himself from being portrayed as the poodle of the US president, Donald Trump. The prime minister irked Tusk on Saturday by failing to bring any new concrete proposals to a meeting the pair held in the fringes of the summit. Before the prime minister arrived in Biarritz, Tusk had warned him against “going down in history as Mr No Deal”. MPs hope to find some parliamentary procedure that will bind Johnson’s hands – perhaps by passing a law that would mandate him to request an extension to article 50, before the EU council due in mid-October. But Downing Street believes that leaving without a deal remains the default legal position, and no further vote by parliamentarians is needed to approve it. It emerged this weekend that No 10 had sought legal advice from the attorney general, Geoffrey Cox, about the possibility of shutting down parliament from September.
